TO WHAT WE CAN DO

Explorers have always been great storytellers – with tales of exotic lands, curious encounters, and incredible experiences brought home like souvenirs. In recent years, travelers have told their tales on social media. Our feeds are filled with the impressive adventures of friends and influencers, fueling our appetite for increasingly immersive, offbeat, daring ways to experience the essence of a destination. For many, it is enough to simply stand and stare at the pyramids; but some of us have a desire to delve deeper, to duck through narrow passageways in search of ancient treasures, accompanied by an Egyptologist who will translate the stories painted within. Why walk through the rainforest when you can zipline through the tree canopy, surrounded by the rainbow-flash of hummingbirds?

Unique experiences have become the ultimate luxury and the most precious social currency of travel. Which is why, when Crystal joined A&K Travel Group in June 2022, it was a game-changer for the cruise company's shore excursions. Crystal has always been a leader at sea; but now, with A&K's longstanding expertise and global network of people all passionate about travel – polar explorers and wildlife experts, society fixers and the best local guides all over the world – Crystal will be able to deliver the kind of next-level shore experiences other cruise lines cannot match.

“What we are bringing to Crystal is the accumulation of six decades of creating unique travel experiences, through an in-depth knowledge of each of the destinations, and the connections that our people have,” says Fernando Delgado, Chief Product Officer at Abercrombie & Kent, who is helming the operation to elevate Crystal's shore excursions to the next level. “It is through those connections that we can get access to places that other travelers cannot go.”

With Crystal now part of the A&K family, guests will have the flexibility to craft a bespoke journey that encompasses more than just a cruise. Cruise itineraries can be topped and tailed with Pre- and Post-Cruise Extensions, seamlessly curated by one global team at every stage of the journey – whether that's spending a few more nights in the departure port town, or something more adventurous.

“Let's say you are taking a cruise from Mombasa to Dubai; that is a perfect opportunity to take a pre-cruise safari at our Olonana camp in Kenya, or Gorilla Forest Camp in Uganda,” says Delgado.

It will even be possible for guests to insert a bespoke overland interlude into their cruise, flying off for a private adventure before rejoining their ship later.

“On a cruise along the coast of South America, for example, from Manta in Ecuador we could charter one of our Ecoventura yachts for 20 guests, and give them a week in the Galápagos while the ship continues to sail down to Lima.”

As part of the project, Delgado's team and A&K's global network of local guides are devising a revolutionary series of out-of-this-world Unique Experiences and Overland Adventures, finding innovative ways to engage guests in the essence of a destination while presenting it in a new light.

“What I want is to move away from what everybody is doing, over and over again,” Delgado says. “More exclusivity, more uniqueness, more authenticity.”

“We really want to surprise the guests, give them the kind of experiences you wouldn't be able to find in a guidebook,” says Stefanie Schmutde, Abercrombie & Kent's Senior Vice President of Global Product Strategy, who is working with Delgado on the project. “We want them to turn a corner and say ‘Wow! I was not expecting that!’”

A&K's team have been brainstorming ways of layering elements of the native culture – whether it's an unusual mode of transport, local cuisine or music – so that experiences become diverse and multi-sensorial. The sky really is the limit.

“I love the idea of taking a chartered helicopter ride to a destination a few hours away, and getting our guests into a completely new setting,” Schmutde says. “Or arriving in Italy and having a row of luxury cars like Ferraris to drive off to an activity – perhaps a cookery class, or a farm-to-table culinary experience in an incredible setting; or high-adrenalin activities such as flying a fighter jet. There is no limit to what we can do.”

The result is Crystal's portfolio of Unique Experiences and Overland Adventures by Abercrombie & Kent, which launches in 2024 in countries ranging from Australia to Argentina. Each is a one-off, with group size strictly limited to a maximum of 18 Crystal guests, on a first-come, first-served basis.

“We want to get back to the pioneer mindset that Abercrombie & Kent had at the very beginning, when Geoffrey Kent had the vision of doing safaris in a completely different way,” Delgado says. “Central to everything was the experience of the guest.”

THE MASTER

Nobu Matsuhisa is one of the world's most celebrated chefs, which is why we're proud to announce that his unique onboard restaurant concept, Umi Uma, has returned to Crystal Serenity and Crystal Symphony. In this exclusive interview, the sushi master talks about his passion for cooking.

Interview PAUL FEINSTEIN

The name "Nobu Matsuhisa" conjures many things for many people. It represents one of the first modern sushi restaurants in Los Angeles: Matsuhisa, opened in 1987. It's famous for the ground-breaking Japanese/Peruvian fusion cuisine served at his eponymous Nobu restaurants, found in more than 50 locations internationally. And it's a byword for luxury accommodation at the 18 Nobu hotels dotted around the globe.

Nobuyuki "Nobu" Matsuhisa is arguably the world's most celebrated Japanese chef for a reason. He's been honing his craft in restaurants since the 1960s and has been greatly influenced by time spent living in places like Peru, Argentina, and even Alaska. He's won a much-coveted James Beard Award, and his hospitality empire continues to grow and grow with no end in sight.

Which brings us to his collaboration with Crystal, and his one-of-a-kind restaurant Umi Uma. The name roughly means sea horse in Japanese, mirroring the Crystal double sea horse logo, and the menu features a cornucopia of Nobu specialties like his Crispy Rice Cake with spicy tuna and his uber-famous Black Cod with miso. It's one of the most desirable dining options for any cruise ship on the high seas, and it's exclusive to Crystal.

We chatted with the superstar chef about the return of Umi Uma to Crystal and what keeps him inspired as he continues to grow his thriving restaurant and hotel businesses.

PF How would you describe the Umi Uma experience?

NM Umi Uma is a 60-seat restaurant, so not too big. It's a mix of homey, friendly, and comfortable, with really good food and service. Because it's on a cruise ship, it's homier – as you get to know the same customers every day. That means you get to make it more like a family.

PF What first attracted you to working with Crystal to create a restaurant concept at sea?

NM Well, I started it in 2003, and in the beginning, it was a big challenge for me. We have restaurants in cities, but we never did it on a cruise ship because I worried about how I could get fresh products and how I could do business every day. So, I started the challenge little by little, just to understand more than before. But I already had the concept with Matsuhisa with exactly the same menu, and the same service, which I started with Crystal Cruises.

PF When you were creating this restaurant, what was your number-one priority?

NM It's quality. Because again, my concern from the beginning was, "How can I get fresh products?" You know, I like to go to another country, and I like to see the market, even the fish market and vegetable market. I like to find new products and bring them to the restaurant and start cooking for myself. And as for sustainability, from the beginning, I don't want to waste anything. I appreciate what it means to catch fresh fish and to find good quality vegetables and meat. But I really don't want to waste anything and as much as possible, use everything.

 ANYONE CAN MAKE SUSHI,
 BUT IF PEOPLE WANT TO GO TO THE NEXT LEVEL, IT
 HAS TO BE WITH PASSION

PF When you think about the concept of ikegai (the things that give your life worth, meaning, or purpose), what does it mean to you as a restaurateur?

NM I started when I was 18, and a career as a chef was my dream. I'm in the restaurant business not only to make money, but to have customers coming, enjoying their dinner, smiling, and then coming back again. This is what I want to do every day, so this is my ikegai.

PF When did you know you wanted to do this for a living?

NM When I was a kid, my brother took me to a sushi restaurant. This was my first experience. This was the first time I sat at the counter and watched the chef make [the sushi] one by one. This experience wowed me, and I knew then I wanted to be chef.

PF Is it possible to become a sushi master if you don't have that singular focus and commitment?

NM Anyone can make sushi, but if people want to go to the next level, it has to be with passion. Without passion, they're just doing the job.

PF When you hire people, how can you tell if they have that passion?

NM In the beginning I interviewed new people myself. My first question was, "Do you like to make sushi and do you like cooking?" Some people, before I asked the question, said, "How much will you pay me?" That means I'm not going to hire them.

PF Can you talk a little bit about the design of Umi Uma and your thinking behind it?

NM In the restaurant business, the most important things are good food, good service, and good atmosphere. For me, the design is important and it's part of that combination of good food, good service, and good atmosphere.

PF How would you describe the style of service at Umi Uma?

NM Umi Uma is only 60 seats, so you have to pay close attention. But I'm not looking for Michelin-style service; it's more casual, with good food and people eating while they're comfortable.

NOBU'S FAMOUS
 BLACK COD WITH MISO

PF Will you be cooking on any of the cruises? Can we expect to see you behind the counter at Umi Uma?

NM Of course. I go on cruises, and I'm a guest chef. I cook, I do a cooking demonstration, and I stay in the kitchen to create new dishes with the chefs. Cooking is my life; cooking is my job.

PF The original Nobu opened in New York in 1994, so this year marks its 30th anniversary. Looking back, what are you most proud of?

NM I started training as a chef at 18, after finishing high school. Now, 56 years later, we have 56 Nobu restaurants and 16 Matsuhisa restaurants. We're on five continents. I have so much that I'm proud of. At the same time, all the teams grew like my family. So, I'm proud of that, too.

PF Japanese and Peruvian cuisine fusion was a new concept in 1994. What inspired you to bring those flavors together?

NM I was born in Japan, and I started training in Japan. Japan is very simple. For sashimi you use soy sauce and wasabi. But when I moved to Peru when I was 24, I tasted a ceviche. And ceviche is the same fish but cooked with lemon juice. They never use soy sauce. And then they use garlic, chili paste, cilantro, all the same fish, but cooked in a completely different way. After this experience, my eyes opened, and it meant cooking with more freedom. Then I started to create more while keeping the simple product but cooking in a different way.

PF Black Cod with miso is the dish you're most famous for. Why do you think it struck a chord with so many people?

NM The miso cod is basically a very traditional Japanese food. In Japan, we didn't use to have refrigerators. To make the fish keep longer, you marinated or salted. With the black cod, I started to marinate one day, two days, three days. And finally, after three days, I cooked it for myself, and it tasted great. Then I put it on the menu and started recommending it to customers. The first one ate it and loved it. Then the second customer loved it. After a while it became my signature dish and the most world famous.

PF Do you think you'll ever retire?

NM I like to keep working and I like to keep spending time with my team. I like to see my customers as much as possible. You know, life is beautiful. And I enjoy my life. That means no retirement.
